

CHARGING THE BULLET: A SCIENTIFIC EVALUATION OF POLICE TRAINING TACTICS.

Duane Wolfe, a Police Officer and trainer, has an April 20, 2012 article on PoliceOne.com. It is titled: "Charging the bullet: A scientific evaluation of our tactics". Here's a link:

Basically, the article deals with very close self defense situations, and says it is best to move and shoot rather than charge and make a deflection or disarm move, as a "perp" can draw and shoot quicker than you can close and make contact.

With movement, the "perp" will have to restart his/her OOAD loop so you will gain time to draw and shoot and gain distance which will increase your survival chance.

End.
